Demonstrating cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), an emergency lifesaving procedure, on life-size manikin is Jim Castelaw of Griffin, Ga., a 1975 national winner in the 4-H health program supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, gives 4-H members opportunities to learn CPR and other practical self-help skills.

4-H'ers Master CPR: 'Second Chance To Live'

CHICAGO—More than 650,000 Americans die suddenly each year of heart attacks, choking, poisoning, drowning, smoke inhalation or other causes. For some of these victims, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) might have meant a "second chance to live."

CPR is an emergency lifesaving procedure performed by an individual to provide artificial breathing and blood circulation for a person whose own breathing mechanism and heart have stopped.

4-H members who are about 14 years of age or older and of sufficient size and ability may be able to learn CPR techniques from a qualified instructor at 4-H camps, during club meetings or in other 4-H activities.

CPR is one of several self-help skills emphasized in the national 4-H health program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program gives 4-H'ers learn-by-doing opportunities to develop skills in first aid, exercise, diet and nutrition, disease prevention and control, and eye, dental and foot care.

Projects and activities also encourage an understanding of health-related environmental issues, such as pollution and sanitation control, and stimulate young people 9-19 to broaden their outlook by making contact with members of other generations. 4-H'ers discover where community health facilities are located, what services they provide and when to seek the services of a health care professional.

For outstanding accomplishments by health program members, Eli Lilly offers awards ranging from seven $800 scholarships at the national level to four medals of honor per county. One boy or girl in each state receives an expense-paid trip to the 56th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 1.

Winners are chosen by the Extension Service, and awards are arranged and announced by National 4-H Council. More information on the program is available from county extension agents.

TIPS FOR SAFE BOATING

Periodic Inspection

Many boat owners/operators may not realize the serious consequences which may occur should a steering system fail because it was not properly maintained and frequently inspected. Many boat accidents involving loss of control, violent turns, people thrown from the boat, collisions and persons struck by the propeller are the result of steering system failure. The illusion that lock nuts will always lock and that "maintenance free" systems never need to be maintained can and does account for many serious accidents.

Boat owners and operators should inspect for loose connections in the steering system itself; inspect for loose connections to the hull, engine, or rudder; remove any rust that has accumulated and determine whether it has caused serious deterioration to parts in the system; lubricate moving parts in accordance with the steering system manual or instructions.

Careful and frequent adherence to these procedures will reduce the chances that you will have an accident as a result of a steering failure. It is the safety-conscious boatman who uses good judgement and is sure that his boat and its equipment are operating properly before he uses his boat.

HOUSE OF RISING SUN CLOSES

funds at the Division of Substance Abuse of the State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. We learned that there are simply no State dollars available this year."

Opened a little over a year ago, the House of the Rising Sun is a member of a continuum of local alcoholic programs serving the residents of the counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford and Campbell, and the cities of Bedford and Lynchburg. It works closely with the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center and the outpatient alcoholic clinic (C.A.R.E.). The House has space for nine clients and is open to both sexes, all ages and races. Some drug dependent clients have been treated as well as alcoholics. The program attempts to provide regular housing and counseling support while the recovering alcoholic is attempting to resocialize and re-enter the work force.

Miss Maurine Clingempeel, Director of the program, stated that during its first year of operation the program served 39 clients, most of whom stayed three months or less. Of the 39 individuals, 25 were jobless when they entered the program, and 16 of these were able to obtain jobs while in the program. The remaining nine were either disabled or on receiving Social Security. Most clients stayed at the House one to three months. Follow-up studies on maintenance of sobriety reveals that 19 are still sober, nine are drinking again and the sobriety of the remaining 11 is unknown. Miss Clingempeel stated, "I feel that this program has shown that it performs a useful service to the community. Unfortunately, we don't succeed with all our clients, but our success rate for our maiden year of operation is encouraging. It's very important to provide supervised living and resocialization for the recovering alcoholic while he's trying to re-enter society. If the House closes, in most cases the supervision will not be available to these individuals, many of whom have lost touch with their families, employers and friends. Returning to isolation and loneliness is unhealthy for them. Last year's program ended with a deficit of $1,400. We had hoped that better funding for this year would have stopped the program's demise, but someone who hears of our plight will be in a position to rescue this needed service."
